1 What is 4chan?

4chan at its core is multiple image boards that any one can post on. Well after you solve the captcha thing. Later in this article I will tell you how to solve that issue of 4chan. Without it all you can do is consume 4chan's great content. 4chan has multiple community requested boards that you can do stuff on. The main one that I go to /g/ 4chan's g board which is for some reason the technology one not g for game's or something. There are plenty of like minded people there are willing to chat about all kind of topics. Not just technology. I try to stick away from 4chan's nsfw parts. Those are weird and disgusting. The big points about 4chan is that it is completely open source. SO when you grow up and start disliking the platform but also have loads of cash in your pocket for a server you just fork it. You are aloud to post whatever you want on the 4chan website which give's you freedom only really similar to the freedom of something like odyssey/lbry. Just 4chan is a lot more extreme in its freedom. 4chan from a privacy aspect is that they store your IP address. Though is that really a concern if any other website can do that? Let alone the primary OS Windows that knows where you live. So all and all 4chan is pretty appealing over any other content service.

2 NSFW parts of 4chan

There are these annoying little banner's at the top that advertised servers that NSFW I personally never want those. So ALWAYS be careful what you click on if you don't want to see NSFW. When you see happy pepe's it doesn't always mean that after you scroll down a bit more you won't find something nasty.

3 Images... Yes, Also reading!

While the primary focus of 4chan is the image sharing there are a lot of discussions as I call them that get brought up with a image along side. You then can comment! Share your views on the subject matter and talk with like minded individuals. All of this while staying anonymous to others. I feel as though this format is better then watching odyssey/invidious for hours on end. For me I find it actually fun and I don't waste to much time doing it. After all the fun I just go straight back to working on other projects.

4 Toxicity

Given 4chan's freedom there is A LOT of toxicity which used to be way to much for me. Well I have come to realize that life sucks and nothing is perfect life is how life is not hearing other people's views and just shoving them out is not a option. Those are people to at the end of the day.

5 Not to bad community

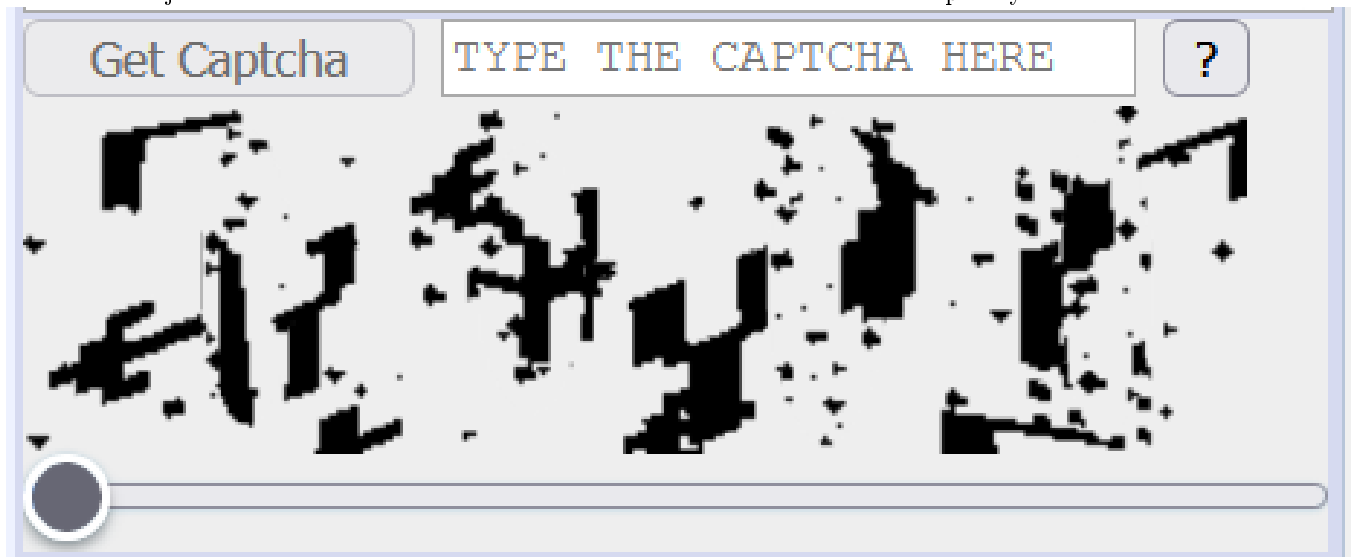

Now aside from the toxicity of 4chan what about the positive's of the community. I find while after making a post There is definitely going to be something negative someone says but there is always one positive post that is from the heart and actually helpful. You then can engage with the like minded inviolate. Other then that you can actually ask questions 4chan related to technology. This is actual help from people. With like a 90 percent chance of actual help to what you need. So 4chan isn't all toxic.

6 What about posting?

Okay now that maybe your hooked on to this 4chan stuff. You might have some trouble actually engaging with people because 4chan wants you to this captcha. This captcha looks a bit confusing and unsolvable. It's actually really easy. Nothing to worry about. This captcha for context was put in so that bots would not be posting on 4chan all the time. Here is a tutorial on how to solve it.

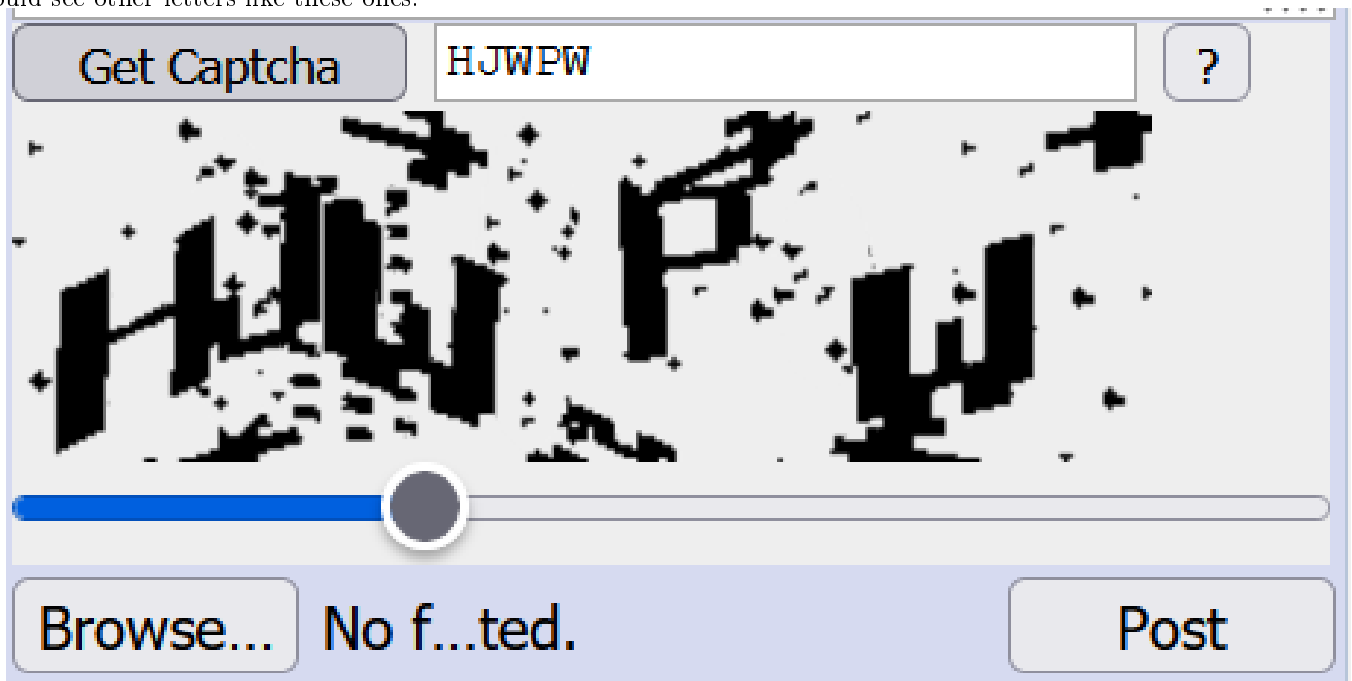

6.1 Step 1

So you as you can see below there is this confusing text string that makes no sense. You then see a slider at the bottom. Your objective is to move the slider forward till R at least starts to be completely visible.

6.2 Step 2

Now hopefully after you made the first LETTER not arrow or dots or any other stuff. Completely filled in you should see other letters like these ones:

6.3 Step 3

Hopefully if your lucky you just now solved the captcha. So your image and message just went through! Good job!

7 Bye Bye!

I hope that maybe this article was somehow useful to you. Have a great day!
